Dear Ms. Boyce,

I received what appears to be a proffer from your client this afternoon. It's my understanding that I should communicate such matters with you and you alone. Please communicate with me directly or counsel your client accordingly to avoid future confusion.

I remain unrepresented. I am preparing an affidavit. I will deliver it to you directly by email Dec. 6, or by lawyer as instructed. My offer remains outstanding. Please communicate with me about such matters until I am otherwise informed.

In the meantime I remained concerned about my daughters and would like information about them. Your client has communicated to me directly that she does not want me to correspond with her, that she will continue to interfere with and block contact between me and my daughters regardless of court order or their best interests.

Nevertheless, she continues to contact me. I kindly ask that you provide explicit detail about what contact and/or correspondence your client is:

- 1) going to provide, and
- 2) willing to accept and then respond to

Until such clarity is provided or I receive my own legal counsel I will follow the explicit direction that your client, your colleague and you have provided.

Thank-you,

Darryl Ross

Hi Darryl,

Here is an update on the girls.

Charlotte has sprained her ankle again and is on crutches and a boot. X-ray shows no sign of broken.

In January I will be taking her to another physiotherapist to look at the issue and evaluate her ergonomically as well. Right now she is doing her practices and getting stronger.

She is registered for basketball with her BFF so we are just waiting for her to heal. She is doing well at school and has some great friends. She does have a lot of separation anxiety and trauma so she is seeing a therapist to help her deal with it.

Alice is doing really well this year, she is taking an art class and flourishing in it. She also has made some close BFFs and is enjoying school and her friends and fam. Her studies are great, the only area she needs to work on is reading so we are practicing at home.

She does have some anxiety when I am away so I am working with her to ease some of it.

I am away this Friday for a week in aCuba with my friend. My neighbour Maureen is staying with the girls this weekend and next week they are staying with school friends , Michelle and Matt are great with them and they feel comfortable and safe there. Maureen is getting some help from my mom. The girls care for Maureen and are very happy to be staying in their own home this weekend.

I will send the therapist information. I will be offline for a week so will respond back when I return.

Cynthia

Hi Darryl,

The girls are receiving their first vaccine in December 2.

For Christmas I would like to arrange the same type of visit over FaceTime while the girls open their gifts from you. They will most likely have something for you too.

I can arrange pick up of gifts closer to the date.

I missed interviews with teachers but I am going speak to them later in the week of there are any issues with their work. Reports are online.
